

MEN AND THE DUDE.

able Clothes and How to Wear Them This Summer.

STYLES ARE POSITIVELY GAY.

of All Colors Are Worn—The Latest Styles in Hats, Ties and Socks.

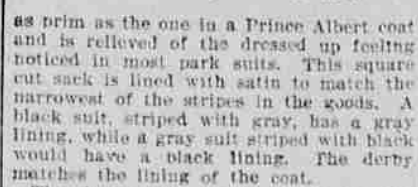

are certainly getting back to the old days of Robespierre in the matter of fashion. The man who wears a suit and suit cutaway over a checked summer shirt is out of style. For men are much more people, even positively gay.

your best brother in a waistcoat and a cloth checked with red, with red sleeves! Waistcoats have sleeves and, in one seeing them for the first time, look not unlike pea-jackets, yet the great difference of dressiness, and blue waistcoats with black spots, and was quite the most elegant thing turned out by our tailors. The cloth of the coat was extremely fine and reminded one of the delicate knitted goods which the ladies of the South did for their men during the war. It was a clear gray, without a suggestion of black, and the black satin lining, alighting and stiff, gave it shape and set it off. This style can be highly recommended for the summer man.

The most beautiful "park" suit for a man is the square cut back, which has four buttons and is straight at the sides, giving the figure an English look. It is made of light weight striped goods with straps running lengthwise the figure. The man in such a suit as this does not look as prim as the one in a Prince Albert coat and is relieved of the dreary old feeling noticed in most park suits. This square cut back is lined with satin to match the narrowest of the stripes in the goods. A black suit, striped with gray, has a gray lining, while a gray suit striped with black would have a black lining. The derby matches the lining of the coat.

The fashionable men's gloves are the suede gloves, which are exactly like a woman's gloves, only larger. Gloves for men, as displayed upon the counters, look like those belonging to women. They have the same large buttons and the same strong broad stitching in the back, only they are of larger sizes. Men wear their gloves two sizes larger in proportion to the hand than women do; and to this fact alone can be attributed the thick look which so many men's suede gloves have. In reality the weight is the same. There is a very light dogskin glove which, though very clumsy in the finish, is very useful and wears a lifetime. The fingers of these gloves have an uncomfortable will keep them busy for some time yet without additional order. The same old cry of "more of cars is heard here" this week, every one of the mills experiencing more or less trouble in securing the cars wanted. In our presence, one of the mills sent a report, signed for seventeen cars, including several box cars and some of 60,000 capacity. Imagine the disgust of the shippers when the cars were shorted in two little flat cars of 20,000 capacity, and that was all he got out of his regulation for seventeen. The line is only a few feet out of the mill, and it causes one to wonder how the railroad expects to take care of its business here when cotton begins to move.

It J. L. Litcher, president of the Litcher & Moore Lumber company, went down to Litcher, La., this week to look after his cypress interests at that place. Mrs. Litcher accompanied him. While in New Orleans a reporter for the Post inquired of him as to the prospects of the lumber business on the Mississippi Valley road. The Litcher says: "The Litcher, a leading lumberman of Orange, Tex., is stopping at the St. Charles. He speaks of the lumber business in a very encouraging way. Mr. Litcher has a brother who is largely interested in the lumber business on the Mississippi Valley road."

The low stage of water in the river for the past month or so, has delayed work on the Hampton & Kelly timber tract at Beck's Bend considerably, on account of their being unable to get their locomotive and rafts down the river. A barge was started on the river two weeks ago with this material, but was unable to reach its destination. Word was received here Wednesday of a six-foot rise in the river, and the lumbermen at Beck's Bend are now able to get their material down to its destination. Work on the tract will be pushed vigorously, and soon it will be dumping logs into the river there for the mill at Orange.

At 6:00 o'clock yesterday evening the largest flag in the city was raised over the elevated tank at the Litcher & Moore Lumber company's mill. The flag is a beauty, its dimensions being 15x25 feet. As the men came filing out of the mill after the 6 o'clock whistle blew the beautiful flag was raised by Mr. W. H. Stark, secretary-treasurer of the company, assisted by Captain Bryant and Antonio Harriet. As the flag reached the topmost pinnacle of the staff several blasts were blown on the big mill whistle and Halper, the blacksmith, touched on an anvil he had loaded for the square finish, but if the gloves are carefully put on the first time this is obviated, and the light dogskin becomes a popular summer glove.

The greatest diversity is found in men's summer shirts, which are gaudy to the extreme. A business man is supposed to wear a shirt of bright past with a string tie to match the shirt. On hot days he goes without a vest and wears a shirt and coat. The shirt is extremely long in the bosom and is so long that an 18-inch child-foster shirt drawer is taxed to the utmost to accommodate it.

Shirts of all colors are worn. A red and green plaid is very fashionable so also is a purple and blue, while a white, pink, brown and purple may be called the norm of style.

The material used in these shirts is a brilliant gingham combining many colors. Cheviot and fine hemstitched satin striped materials are also used for these shirt bosoms, and a man wears in the same material for a shirt which his sister wears for an afternoon waist or dress.

Men's bicycle trousers are veritable bloomers and you can scarcely tell who ought to wear them—the young man or his sister. When the trousers are unbuttoned around the leg they hang in the ankles, but when buttoned neatly over the bright stockings they are full around the leg and are rather graceful after you get used to them. For these a plain Saxon material is chosen with a tiny check or figure. Large plaid ones are ridiculous while small checks are pretty.

The very ultra cycle suit consists of a pair of these loose bloomers, a bright plaid shirt and a long sleeved vest with a hat of linen or duck.

The well dressed man sports a great deal of necktie this year. It is very full in the cuff, very broad in the middle and very long. These big ties are worn with or without the waistcoat. To give the tie the requisite puff there comes a thick piece of cloth which is tied in the knot. After the knot is tied, and before the ends are folded over, this heavy piece of cloth is drawn through the knot and is then folded under the ends, thus making a puff. Happy-go-lucky men thrust a sock through the knot and fold the ends of the sock.

Speaking of socks reminds one that they are embroidered by hand. A present of six pairs of hand embroidered socks is not an unusual thing for the summer man to receive from his favorite sister. The sister, when she buys the socks, selects the new kind with vertical stripes. These socks with double heels and double toes suitable for good strong exercise. After she purchases the socks she gets a wash rag with silk to match and embroidered them down the sides with the silk. The silk is known as the gingham upon which and is a big cross stitch. Socks match the shirt and tie, and the day of the black sock is apparently on the wane. It is well in such cases socks that are embroidered to get the best quality, otherwise the handwork is drawn out at the first wearing.

A very nice present for one who does not already own one, is a chifferoni, one of the sort which stands breast high and is only the width of a shirt. These can be worn with a shaving glass on top and six drawers can be filled with shirts, night shirts, socks, collars and cuffs and neckties, respectively. The chifferoni when packed can be easily carried and shipped away by the summer when the summer man goes out of town or taken to the seashore for two weeks' vacation.

If paper is wrapped around and the chifferoni is carried, it will not be hurt in the trunk and will cost no more than an ordinary trunk. A lining of cheese cloth, with cotton and sashet underwear, should be taken in the drawers before the gift is presented.

The family of Mr. George R. Chastain, general manager of the Orange and Wingate Lumber companies, arrived here this week and are now comfortably domiciled in the Sanford residence, corner Green avenue and Fifth streets, recently vacated by the family of Cashier W. W. Reid.

News received from Dewey, the site of the mill being erected by George W. Smythe on the Sabine river, are to the effect that work on the mill is going forward rapidly. A large lot of the material is on the ground and sixteen carpenters are employed in raising the frame of the mill.

A question that is puzzling some of the mills is, if the Southern Pacific can not keep them supplied with cars now in the dull season, what are they going to do when the busy season comes on and the cotton crop to move at the same time.

Manager Higgins of the Sabine Export company reports having received inquiries this week for a South American cargo and one for the United Kingdom, and Mr. Robert Morgan reports a large inquiry from Liverpool. The foreign demand is all right if conditions were such that it could be taken care of.

The only shipment of lumber by water from Orange this week was the schooner J. M. McNamee, which loaded at the Litcher & Moore Lumber company's with a cargo of railroad ties for Corpus Christi.

TEN YEARS AGONY FROM ECZEMA CURED BY CUTICURA
For ten years I suffered untold agonies from Eczema, my lower limbs being so swollen and itched that I could hardly go about. My brother, a physician of thirty years' practice, and other physicians of splendid ability, tried in vain to effect a cure and finally failed. I became absolutely discouraged, and had lost all hope, when a friend induced me to give CUTICURA REMEDIES a trial. I used two cakes of CUTICURA SOAP and two boxes of CUTICURA Ointment, and it resulted in an absolute and permanent cure.
